GREEN TREATED LUMBER - TOO MANY UNKNOWNNS

by Dave Ahlgren

A few years ago at a bluebird workshop I brought up the question about what kind of pesticide was used in the green treated lumber that people commonly have been using for decks, posts, and bird houses. Is there anything toxic in the wood that might affect animals or birds? No one seemed to have any answers.

A short time ago I was in Madison, Wisconsin and had the opportunity to visit the U. S. Forest Products Lab. I talked with a gentleman who does the research on the product. I would like to pass along some of his thoughts. The chemical used in the process is copper-arsenate, which works as a wood preservative and also acts as a pesticide. It is injected into the lumber in one of four concentrations. The higher the concentration, the longer the guarantee. The wood should be dried to about 20% moisture content before it is injected. Not very much of the lumber found on the lumber yard has been dried sufficiently. If the moisture of the wood is too high, the chemical will not properly impregnate the wood. This causes several problems. First, and the most apparent, is that when you cut a board in half you will see that the green chemical has not penetrated all the way to the center of the material, so you are not getting the preservative that you paid for. Second, it takes 30 to 60 days for the chemical to set. Until it is thoroughly "set" the arsenate portion is not tied up. During this time it could cause problems.

Instructions from the producers are quite clear. When cutting the wood, wear plastic or rubber gloves to your elbows, a full face mask, and eye protection. Do not burn any of the scraps in your fireplace or wood stove, as arsenic gases are produced. The human body cannot get rid of arsenic and it could be fatal! Also, if animals should drink standing water from the wood, the arsenate may be in the water and be poisonous to the animal.

No uniform standards are in place for the manufacturers, but should be out early next year. The wood has been on the market for more than 20 years. The injectors in Minnesota and Wisconsin use a compound that is on the top of the list of the most unstable.

If you have a choice, I would recommend that copper-arsenate treated lumber not be used for animals or birds until better standards are found. I should point out that no confirmed cases of any kind of poisoning have been reported to the Forest Products Lab, although there have been numerous unofficial reports.

What should you use? Many exterior plywoods have a high concentration of formaldehyde which is not good either. The new generation of redwood is no better than cheaper pine because the growth rings are so far apart and natural glues tend to not last. It seems that the cedar that is being cut today is the only virgin timber left. So, if you're looking for the ideal, cedar seems to be the only choice left for a lumber that will last outside.

Dear Friend:

I hope that you have had an enjoyable and rewarding year in helping the bluebirds. Even though the excessive heat and drought held our total numbers somewhat below the record results of 1987, I sense that the enthusiasm for helping bluebirds is greater than ever!

It was in 1983 - just five years ago - that we had only 75 people fledge 2816 bluebirds. This year we had 468 reports from people who raised 12,507 bluebirds! Keep up the good work!

Meanwhile, the Nongame Wildlife Checkoff program continued to grow as well. Checkoff donations increased nearly $100,000 to approximately $900,000! Thank you for your dedicated support for the Checkoff. We now have over 130 wildlife conservation projects underway in Minnesota - one of them being bluebird recovery.

Hopefully the drought will be behind us in 1989 and we can look forward to the best year ever for bluebirds. I look forward to your continued reports and to your support for helping Minnesota's wildlife.

Sincerely,

Carrol L. Henderson
Nongame Supervisor
Section of Wildlife

Please add this page to your 1988 Bluebird Recovery Program Directory. We apologize for the omission of our faithful and productive reporters in the M-N-O-P counties. We had a "slip be'twixt the machine that reduces the large computer printout and the cut-paste, print-ready copy". We are blaming the machines - please forgive them. (Dorene & Mary Ellen)

Additional corrections:

The nesting reports from LeRoy R. Will (Bemidji) for Beltrami County and Bigstone County were transposed.
We received reports from Leonard K. Lackore (Willmer) for three counties. Results from Becker County are in the Directory; results from Hubbard and Kandiyohi Counties did not get recorded.
