BLUEBIRD RECOVERY PROGRAM
AUDUBON CHAPTER OF MINNEAPOLIS

P.O. BOX [REDACTED] 3801
MINNEAPOLIS, MINNESOTA [REDACTED] 55403

November 13, 1991

Dear Friends,

The 1991 bluebird directory contains data from 445 reports on 10,952 boxes. There were 4,243 successful broods with 21,664 eggs. 15,257 bluebirds fledged. The Minnesota totals were: 8,290 boxes; 3181 broods; 17,756 eggs and 11,915 fledged.

With 100 (18%) less reports than last year, there was a 10% drop in total boxes reported (11,530 in '90). Reported fledglings were down only 7% (from 16,437), so it actually was another good year for bluebirds.

What is the purpose of the directory? It not only helps bluebirders to find each other in time of need or just to compare notes, it also reveals trends. How many more bluebirds would have been reported if everyone had sent in reports? We don't know, but if 1/4 of our approximately 2300 active members would continue to report each year, and we had data from some of the 23 missing Minnesota counties (87 in all), that would be a healthy representation of our bluebirding picture.

This year some newer problems increased, and some old ones continued to decline. Controls such as trapping and using sparrow-resistant boxes have resulted in a large drop in sparrow problems. But another usurper and predator is on the rise: the house wren. Beneficial in the garden, and lovely singers, they can be real terrors, pecking bluebird eggs and even carrying out nestlings just short of fledging. We need to find a good, legal mean to keep wrens out of boxes that have to be near shrubs or trees. Tree swallow numbers are down drastically. Is this just a natural low in a cycle, an indication of trouble on the wintering grounds, increased pesticide use, or what? Raccoon problems were mentioned in 12% of the reports. Continuous cold with rain in May took its toll also.

Changes in the report form have been suggested and will be made next year. Comments are also welcome about the enclosed directory. Detailed data from the back of the report form will be tabulated and published later.

Donations to the MN Nongame Wildlife Checkoff went down for the first time since it began, so we did not receive help with publication of the directory this year.

Special thanks for the compilation of this directory go to: Philip Wagner for entering all the data in the computer; Dorene Scriven, John Thompson and Steve Gilbertson for analyzing the reports; Joyce Nellis and Dave Ahlgren for tabulating and printing the results; and to Becky and Evelyn Knopp for the mailing. Thanks also to wildlife artist Dan Milbert for letting us use, on the cover, his drawing of a bluebird alongside that of Dan Metz's Peterson box sketch.

Sincerely,

Mary Ellen Vetter, Chair
